

James Corner Field Operation raises 'icebergs' inside this museum in Washington

4:00 - August 7, 2016 by Nicholas Patrick Lynch In Valencia

After the popular exercises Snarkitecture (BEACH) and BIG (Labyrinth), the National Building Museum in Washington chose James Corner Field Operations for its summer 2016 edition installation.

Icebergs is an interactive architectural exercise of 'icebergs' spread in the Great Hall of the museum, inviting the public to escape the hot summer in Washington, scalable exploring icebergs, ice bins, caves and more.

Video courtesy of Work Zone Cam.

Spanish translated using Google Translate.